

Lobby Showcases High Tech Missions

The polished steel surfaces of the Tobyhanna Army Depot Command Headquarters lobby reflect the high tech mission of this electronics maintenance facility in the Pocono Mountains of Pennsylvania.

Buchart Horn's revitalization design replaced asbestos floor tiles with ceramic; replaced overhead fluorescent lights with track and pendant lighting; provided recessed directional lighting for displays and contemporary lighting fixtures in offices and conference rooms; and replaced dated office furnishings with contemporary ergonomic workstations.

Curved perforated metal panels replaced block ceiling tiles and modern glass cases display the Depot's history and missions, current technologies, service awards and Command leadership portraits. Visitors are greeted by a touch-screen information kiosk at a circular mahogany reception station in the center of the 20,000-sq. ft. lobby.

The project added a new atrium style glass-backed elevator to provide ADA access to all levels of the facility.
